8. Complaints

Staff

Where staff feel they have been discriminated against, victimised, or harassed by any colleague (including managers), the aim should be to deal with it informally in the first instance.

Informal Stage

It may be the discriminatory action was unconscious and easily resolved once the situation is highlighted. This is often the most efficient way with dealing with such circumstances and helps maintain good working relations.

The member of staff should raise the issue informally with their line manager (if the complaint is against their manager, then the manager next in line). The manager will speak to the person whom the complaint is against. If it is found the behaviour was in breach of this policy, an appropriate level of sanction will be decided in line with the Disciplinary Policy. A file note of the incident will be kept on the complainant's file, including a statement, the note will only be considered if there are any further incidents. Dealing with the matter informally does not remove the complaining staff member's right to have the matter dealt with formally.

Formal Stage

If the member of staff is dissatisfied with the informal stage outcome or the complaint is serious, they should raise the matter in writing to their line manager. The complaint will then be dealt with under the Grievance Policy. In line with this process an investigation into the complaint will be carried out. If the outcome of the investigation is that a formal disciplinary hearing should take place, this will be conducted in line with the Disciplinary Procedures.

Stakeholders

The right to be treated equally with dignity and respect extends to outside contractors, partners, service users, customers and any other agencies which are associated with this organisation. Stakeholders have a right to have any issues addressed under this policy. Any complaints will be investigated, and appropriate action will be taken. If a stakeholder feels they are being discriminated against in the course of their working day, the following procedure should be followed.

Informal Stage

Where possible, incidents should be dealt with informally. The stakeholder should report the matter to their lead contact within the organisation as soon as possible. It may be the discriminatory action is unconscious and easily resolved once the situation is highlighted.

The manager will discuss the situation with the individual whom the complaint is against and explain the expected standards of behaviour and the consequences of failing to comply with these. It will be made clear to the individual continuation of such conduct may result in being subject to disciplinary action.

Formal Stage

Where informal action is not appropriate, or the matter is of a serious nature the complaint will be dealt with using the formal procedure. A thorough investigation will take place in the first instance. If it is found an individual has acted inappropriately, they will be advised in writing by the relevant senior manager stating their comments, actions, behaviours are not acceptable and potentially discriminatory. The letter will advise any further incidents will not be tolerated and may result in disciplinary action. In cases of physical violence or serious threats the appropriate manager will notify the police.

9. Data Protection Act 2018 (GDPR)

The organisation will treat all personal data in line with obligations under the current data protection regulations.

Failure to adhere to the terms of this policy may result in disciplinary proceedings.
